PUBLISHER'S NOTE

THE Author of this book has spent many years in the Far East, and has been in the thick of the struggle since the outbreak of hostilities between Russia and Japan. He was one of the War Correspondents of the Daily Chronicle from February to May ; then, owing to the severity of the censorship, he ceased sending his despatches, but he still remained at the seat of war. The manuscript was posted to us from Seoul, in Korea, on September 14, and reached London on October 25. In order to lose no time in publishing the book, the proofs have been read here, and we must crave the reader's indulgence for any errors that may have escaped notice in the absence of revision by the Author.

Many of the illustrations are from photographs supplied by Mr. Cowen ; others are from some interesting sketches sent with the manuscript without any explanatory note, but apparently the work of a Japanese artist.

For the rest we are indebted to the representatives of Collier's Weekly, Mr. Bulla, and others, whose enterprise has given us some remarkable and realistic scenes from the actual field of battle.
