As a complicated and a multilevel phenomenon, national identity can be regarded both in the aspect of an individual's labelling him or herself as a part of some certain community or in the aspect of a formed concept of this community. An artistic painting taken as an artistic image, which is the process and the result of an interaction between the viewer and the material object, can act as a means of making the conditions for a person to regard him or herself as an individual, or a means of forming the concept of the national unity, or an essential part of this unity.

Point

1. A possibility of forming Russian national identity by means of an artistic painting

The problem of forming the national identity is of current interest for modern Russia due to the necessity of searching the balance between accepting the national uniqueness of the diversity of the nations populating the country, and uniting them into one multinational whole of Russia. This problem is especially topical for such multinational regions of the country like Krasnoyarsk region, that does not only face a very intensive immigrant influx (Chinese, Armenians, Kirghiz, Azerbaijanians, Uzbeks), but also enjoys a great diversity of ethnic groups that populate it (Russians, Poles, Ukrainians, Chuvashes, Evenkis, Khakass, Chulymys, Selkups, Ketts, Yakuts etc.)

In the modern culturology there is a concept of an opportunity of efficient forming the national
