A man unblameable in word and thought,
A man hath risen,—a man whom God hath taught,...
With all Elijah's dignity of tone,
And all the love of the beloved John,
To storm the citadels men build in air,
And smite the untemper'd wall 'tis death to spare,
To sweep away all refuges of lies,
And place, instead of quirks that men devise,
The living truths of God before their eyes.
