SUMMARY

Zhurova, L.I. Maksim Greek's Works in the Russian Book Culture in the End of the XVI – Beginning of the XVII Centuries.

The article presents results of investigation of Maksim Greek's Works (13 chapters of his lifetime collection) based on collections and manuscripts, composed by Russian scribes in the end of the XVI – beginning of the XVII centuries. Tradition of Ioasaph collection was continued by the collection of archbishop Iona Dumin and Sinodalnoe collection. Khludov collection was put at the base of Solovetskoe, Rogozhskoe, Troitskoe and other collections. Analysis of Maksim Greek's Works in Sibirskiy collection book (State Public Scientific and Technical Library, F.IV.3, end of the XVI century) defines some features of Siberian book culture at the second half of the XVIII century.

Key words: book culture, Maksim Greek's manuscript heritage, textology.

Titova, L.V. The Destiny of Creative Heritage of Pustozersk authors in Kerzhents and Siberia.

The author traces the development of publicist thought of Pustozersk Old Believers and its evolution on the basis of textual analysis. The influence of these conceptions on democratic literature of Old Believers of the XVII century is revealed. The way of creative adoption of Pustozersk literary tradition by the 'second generation' of writers is characterized.

Key words: Old Believers, Pustozersk Archive, publicism, democratic literature.

Zhuravel, O.D. Baroque Tendencies in the Old Believers Book Culture in the First Third of the XVIII Century.

The article is dedicated to the problem of reception of the Baroque by the Old Believers of Vig in 1720–1730s. The analysis of the original Vyg Rhetoric and sermons composed by the Andrey Denisov, writer, ideologist and founder of the Vyg Hermitage ('Vygovskaya pustyn'), reveals the vital part of baroque conceptual and stylistic elements in rhetoric and book culture of the Vig community along with traditional didacticism and new rationalistic trends. Author based its research on previously unexplored manuscripts.

Key words: rhetoric, Baroque, sermon, Old Believers.

Shaffert, E.A. Old Believers' Editing of the 'Big Catechism'.

The article displays the history of changes in the 'Catechism' in the Old Believer's literature tradition during XVII–XVIII centuries. On the basis of ancient books and manuscripts from the depositary of the Institute's of History SB RAS the author exposes reasons of the 'Big Catechism's' editing, and also analyses basic methods of editorial correction, accomplished by defenders of old ceremony.

Key words: Old Belief, Big Catechism, editing, new compositional structure, Lavrentiy Zizania, Vig pomor hermitage, authoritative text.

Chernyshova, N.K. St. Innokenty the First Bishop of Irkutsk and Thaumaturgist: Stages of Hagiography.

The paper considers the stages of St. Innokenty's hagiography in the XIX – beginning of the XX centuries. Criteria for picking out the stages are substantiated; contents of each stage are characterized.

Key words: hagiography, St. Innokenty, bishop, holy man, praise, description of miracles, historical science, spiritual writer.

Zolnikova, N.D. Experience of Geographical and Religious Migration: Features of a Certain Collection of Manuscripts.

In this article the author concludes the research of the manuscript collection of A.P. Perevalova, an Old Believer from Belokrinskiy Congregation. The collection includes texts connected with different religious denominations. Their significant part is related with popular variant of the Orthodoxy (Russian Orthodox Church, currents in opposition to the ROC, including the Old Belief).

Key words: Old Belief, popular Orthodoxy, religious denomination, Russian Orthodox Church, manuscripts.

Bayandin, V.I. Military History of Siberia and Far East in the Second Half of the XIX – the Beginning of the XX Centuries in Memoirs of Contemporaries.

The article gives a review of memoir literature concerning problems of military history of Siberia and Far East. The authors were closely associated with military establishments – soldiers, sailors, officers of the Russian Army, and also civilians. These memoirs were published in Russia before 1917th and during Soviet time as well. Memoirs of the White refugees appeared abroad in 1930s – 1940s. Memoirs present how Russian state established in the Far East, how the Navy on the Pacific Ocean was created and which role it played in development of these territories.

Key words: memoirs, Far East, Russian Army and Navy, military history.

Karnaikhov, D.V. Polish Historical Book in Intellectual Culture of the Renaissance.

The article gives an analysis of one of the most important features of literary culture of the Renaissance – development of book-publishing in national languages on the example of historical publications in Poland. Features of Polish historical books are displayed; special attention is given to two varieties of publications – translations from Latin into Polish language and original historical books in Polish.

Key words: Poland, Renaissance, history of book, intellectual culture, Polish language, Latin, historiography, chronicles, Belsky, Striykovsky, Guagnini.

Erlikh, V.A. Pre-revolutionary Scientific Humanitarian Publications in Western Siberia.

The questions of publishing and circulation of historical, archeological, ethnographical, philological, philosophic and religion studies works in Western Siberia in the end of XIX – beginning of the XX centuries are examined in the paper. The author resumes that themes of humanitarian publications were various enough with prevailing local lore subjects.

Key words: Western Siberia, publishing activity, the humanities, Tomsk University, West Siberian branch of IRGS, museums.

Bazyleva, E.A. Research and Publishing Activity of Siberian Branches of IRGS (Fragments of History).

The paper is dedicated to the publications of scientific literature by Siberian branches of the Imperial Russian geographical society in 1851–1917s in the context of their research activity. Main sections of East-Siberian and West-Siberian departments of the Society, which played great role in the making of the Siberian science, are investigated. The author concludes that the Society's editions contributed significantly to the research and the development of Siberian natural resources, and also increased Siberian cultural potential.

Key words: Imperial Russian geographical society, Siberian branches of IRGS, research and publishing activity, Siberian science.

Shumilov, A.I. Publications of the 'Isparts', 'Istprofs' and 'Istmols' in Siberia in 1920–1930s.

Larichev, V.Ye. The Sculpture of Uterus, the 'Place of Life Origin' and the Time: Calendar-Astronomical Knowledge in the Early Neolithic Epoch of the Lower Cis-Amur Area (the Malyshevskaya Culture).

The article is devoted to the centenary from academic A.P. Okladnikov's birthday and investigates one of his most mysterious finds dated the Early Neolithic Epoch of the Lower Cis-Amur Area (Priamurye; the Malysheva Culture; 6900±260 B.C.). It is clay sculpture covered all over with pattern, pear-shaped and hollow, with small pebbles inside. This 'object of art' is interpreted by the author as Uterus – 'the place which gives birth' to Cosmos, human beings and sacred animals – bear and deer. This semantic appraisal of the sculpture is confirmed by V.Ye. Larichev's deciphering of the numerical symbolic text on its surface.

Key words: Early Neolithic, Lower Cis-Amur Area, Voznesenovskoye Settlement, clay sculpture, symbolic records, astroarchaeological methods of 'reading' the calendar-astronomical information on the surface of the 'object of art'.

Matochkin, Ye.P. The Solar Deity of the Komdosh-Boom Locality.

The cult of Sun, widespread among the early nomad of Altai, didn't have clear reflection in petroglyphic relics of the past. The rock-drawing, recently discovered at the Komdosh-Boom locality near the merge of the Chuya and Katun rivers, gives new interesting material for the study of the Solar cult. There is stamped figure of syncretic zoomorphic being with antlers and the arc-shaped chest. This way ancient astronomers impressed the sunrise above the horizon in days of equinox and summer solstice. Sacrificial Siberian stag ('maral') and two chariots supplement the general idea about the Solar cult of the Altaians at the edge of the II and I millennium B.C.

Key words: Altai, early nomads, Komdosh-Boom locality, rock-drawing, Solar Deity, two chariots, Solar cult, offering to the Sun, sacrificial Siberian stag, ancient astronomers, calculation of the solar time, equinox, solstice.

Barantseva, N.A. Influence of Migration on Formation of the Middle Siberia's Polyethnic Population in the End of XIX – First Quarter of the XX Century.

This article is devoted to the influence of migration on formation of polyethnic population in southern part of Middle Siberia in the end of XIX – first quarter of the XX century. Also modifications of social-demographic characteristics of the native population (national, class, social structure) are taken into consideration; social-economic consequences of migration policy are revealed; geographic sources of urban and rural population's increase are determined; as well as social groups which have provided this growth.

Key words: migration policy, ethnic groups, sources of formation, national structure, population of the Middle Siberia, migrations, ethnic demographic structure.

Butanaeva, I.I. Traditions of Storyteller Skill of Khakass Hadji.

The Khakass connected narrator skill with spirits of musical art – nymakh, hai, saryn, chatkhan etc. Attaining the narrator skill occurs through the ritual of initiation. Folk storytelling also takes place at night when souls of ancient warriors arise. Changes and misinterpretations of legends were prohibited; storytelling was followed by big feast. Folk stories and songs were performed during hunting, fishery and funeral banquet. It was assumed they had magical and ritual power.

Key words: heroic legends, spirits-protectors, business and ritual functions of folk tales.

Shitova, N.I. Christian Symbolic in Clothes of Uimon Old Believers.

The author reveals Christian symbolic of traditional costume of the Old Believers from Uimon valley, Mountainous Altai on the basis of field materials, collected during 1997–2007. As a whole, Old-Believers' garments remain the symbol of belonging to the ancient orthodoxy. Until today clothes are satiated with Christian symbols deliberately. The costume and separate elements of garments are material expression of the most important symbols of faith – the cross and the prayer.

Key words: Old Believers of Uimon, symbolic functions of clothes, symbolic of cross and prayer.

Kirichenko, O.V. Siberia in Geography of Convents in the Beginning of the XX Century.

The article presents the analysis of the territorial location of Russian convents in the XIX – beginning of the XX centuries. Statistical research, based on a number of criterions, displayed the centers of concentration of newly organized communities and convents which coincided with the centers of spiritual asceticism, according to the author. It is clearly displayed in the article that low concentration of convents coincides with reduction of ascetics' influence. Siberia was the example of such territory, thus the number of convents was insignificant in the beginning of the XX century.

Key words: Siberia, beginning of the XX century, convents, statistics, spiritual ascetic, influence.

Antropov, E.V. Novosibirsk and Its Region: General Tendencies of Transformation in Ethnic Demographic Structure in XX–XXI Centuries.

From its foundation in 1893 Novosibirsk (Novonikolaevsk until 1926) developed on the basis of migratory flows from village to city, from European to Asian part of the country. The share of the Russians in Novosibirsk and the region population prevailed and steadily grew during XX century. In post-soviet time 'the western drift' of migration in Siberia became obvious: representatives of European diasporas were leaving the region. Though Slavic population still prevailed in relative density of population of Novosibirsk region, the region becomes accepting community for migrants from the CIS countries and the Southeast Asia. Polyethnicity leaves traces on culture and mode of life of the region population.

Key words: Novosibirsk region, migrations, dynamics of ethnic demographic structure of population.

Goncharova, G.S.; Abramova, M.A. Value Orientations in Family Matrimonial Relationships Among Student Youth of Yakutia.

Authors consider problems of value orientations in family matrimonial relationships among student youth of the Sakha Republic (Yakutia). Survey materials allowed to reveal the increase of the tendency to diverge from traditional model of family relationship. It leads, on the one hand, to the forming of new demographic behavior, and on the other hand – to destruction of family relations, deformation of reproductive behavior.

Key words: Family relationship, demography students, Yakutia.

Markhinin, V.V.; Udalova, I.V. Migrants in Yugra: Problems of Current Importance (According to the Sociological Poll Data).

On the basis of sociological poll data the authors examine social-economic and socio-cultural features of the adaptation of migrants, arrived to Yugra in different time, and the problems they confronted in the okrug. The analysis revealed that the most part of the migrants do not have any intention to re-emigrate, but on the contrary, they try to settle down in Yugra or other regions of Russia.

Key words: migration, adaptation, residential population and migrants, social-economic conditions.
